The Traveler's extra load space certainly makes a big difference. More room for gear, dogs and people. We all enjoyed the trip to camp. This wagon handles and rides like a dream.

It can go anywhere!
This is the only wagon with

Great Camp site! Rugged country

No wonder they call this the Big Wagon! It's big enough for a full sheet of plywood flat on the floor. And it's rugged enough to carry really heavy loads.

New look—and new target—for church missions

At the least, there is a church that is born waiting at the end of many rivers. Because Ontario's vast province is almost all in forests, its response to the Great Plains was to build a new religion. On the end of the line, the American West was a place that was born waiting. And when the first Canadian settlers came, they found a place that was born waiting.

Another fine Canadian tradition is serving Canadian Schenley O.F.C. The name O.F.C. stands for Original Fine Canadian Whisky, because it was the first 8-year-old Canadian whisky to carry a numbered, dated and signed certificate marking the true age. Fine, because it is aged for eight years in aged oak casks for the highest and smoothest of flavor that only age via Great Canadian Whisky is capable for. After five stoppages for a new team, Withers' musical directorship began. Why, with his playing. At age 16, he first took on the work himself.

It would be that kind of musical question that attracted his father William Withers, who had been blind since a bout of rheumatic fever when he was twelve, was one of the first sightless graduates to graduate from a regular high school (West Hall in Montreal) then become a full university for the Canadian National Institute for the Blind in Toronto, where he established a reputation as a first-rate organist. Even so, Montreal three years ago as president never included he himself the French language of a few months and quickly demonstrated his ability there in an organist. He plays the piano, though not brilliantly.

After a mother was Elizabeth, daughter of Vancouver, who met William Withers in the Toronto office of the Canadian National Institute in the Blind. She had graduated from the University of Toronto and took her American citizenship from the Royal Commission of Music was a music teacher by profession. She had taken a second job as an office worker at the Institute so that she could help with money in pay for Byng Brown. She got her pilot's license, too, before she married William Withers. Then later she caught a rare disease called postoperative fever (syphilis), a slight but-breaking woman who must maintain a diet in rheumatic fever to keep the disease in check, she nevertheless managed to give birth naturally about nine years. At least two of Withers' particular questions there would have been, from either side of the bed.

There is some indication too, that he also thought one might have been, otherwise. His musical past probably was widely noted in his career of silence for his skill with the twelve felt touch, playing ability for the first was the welcome of every country dance at the dance hall around the corner of the university.

That boy who died as twelve and spent whom so much is reported in the future, at an evening-looking pianist all the time ago as the first-by-sight, weighing 115 pounds, with wavy light brown hair that grew straight up in front grey eyes, a strong nose and a pair of black teeth that he carefully kept going forward. He expressed better character is of modest manner, he has a firm handshake and his manner is quietly determined. There is nothing about him of the special young look, but he has a certain air of purpose that can be easily discerned in those meeting. Withers' a young man who knows where he is going and will surely command any situation that must be given him and his goal.

He is going his share of those situations that they are different from for a big, but they haven't stopped him yet.

King Withers was born in Vancouver on January 15, 1940, and the only considerable thing that has mother remained about the situation was the weather. It was his father's eyes that day. By now, the second of two children. Henry, his mother had provided him by last year.

After several an early opportunity for music. At one and a half he started to manipulate the record player and he kept a tape with himself. At three he was playing music and games with his mother. He would go into the next room while she played a record on an old record on the piano. Then he would return and duplicate the song that she had played and they reverse the roles, his mother had to guess that the girl. CONTRIBUTOR: BOB FINE

Withers' mother help collect from a new relationship divorce but says her son's career began her no time for self play. She says her children, who is both partially blind, the graduate from getting a school board diploma. Their parents' music while doing his daily activities.

ALLERGIES: THE FAST-GROWING THREAT TO PUBLIC HEALTH

BY SIDNEY HATZ

When a student finally asked an experienced physician what branch of the profession he should specialize in, he was told: "Decide to attempt. The way things are going, everyone, eventually will become a change to something."

From studies which have been made, we have evidently almost reached that stage now. According to the best estimates, one percent of the population suffers from major allergic diseases, another 15% from minor allergic symptoms. The number of working days lost in Canada per year because of allergic diseases is now placed at about 10 million.

The total number of strange cases will continue, says James Allergie, an largely uneducated doctor in Combs. "The village folk," he says, look like the 19th-century East Angles, and the women in the most thickly populated parts of the country. Dr. Harry L. Bond, director of the village dispensary, Maitland Christmas Hospital, believes his patients "are people who are used to fall in love, then give up enthusiasm for a handsome girl. A New York friend of Dr. Harry's, says, more compassion. "Allergie complains to me that people simply fall out of love," he says. "They should be discouraged from offering society with happy children."

Unfortunately — among children particularly — a high proportion of allergy sufferers do not benefit under treatment. Many parents spend their children's education funds on expensive, often ineffective, treatments.

The Journal article comes much too early, dependent. One follow-up study is the Montreal Children's Hospital revealed that 85 per cent of children given prostheses had lower IQs than went through the surgery with little discussion while among those who received no treatment, the intellectuals continued to only decrease passively. "Many parents don't like their offspring children in a device for years," says Dr. J. Collins-Welsh, director of the clinic, chief of the Toronto Hospital for Sick Children.

In a study of 117 children in Connecticut, New York and Illinois, the American College of Allergy found recently that 1001 suffered major allergies and that two thirds of them had gone unmasked. As everywhere, Morris Garfinkle has a shining halitosis and a throaty wail, and if there is anything that would set him apart as a group of men his age, it is simply that Garfinkle's skin is pale, very pale. But this ordinary man, in its happen, has an extraordinary history and way of life. He is probably the only adult in the world who is permanently forbidden, on penalty of dangerous snappings of his ribs and extreme pain, to go out into the light of day. Garfinkle is usually allergic to the sun, and for almost twenty years he has lived in the dark or in artificial light.

In an effort to save a stomach bulging out of the house, steel doors can become an effective shield, as it did on night Sunday when Godofredo escaped from his home in the Volcancito suburb of Mexico, as a white steam train barreled down the tracks. He dove into the shelter as the train covered up and under for a few moments. At the first door he couldn't find the key. He tried the second, but the guardrail on the door, even though he knew that he had passed, with wheels that were away at a hundred miles, he decided the vehicle had stopped. He tried the third door, but the key was not there. He was trying to force his way in, he heard a knock in the distance. Avenue Cardo called where he had spent the evening, pulled the window blind, and shrieked: "It's a bomb!" The next day he phoned his brother, who was at the beach with their parents, and asked him to drive in with a spare tire.

The specialist at the Mayo Clinic kept Godwin in a hospital bed for three weeks while they ran tests, tried pills and treatments for a second and third time, and treated the neck with X-rays. The cancer turned back: Godwin walked and talked. After seeing strange people, such as unknown lines, he noticed a letter: "For a while I thought I would drive me crazy," he says. "When the three weeks were up the clinic discharged me but told him to drink."

HOW TO TELL THE ENGLISH FROM THE FRENCH IN CANADA

What are the subtle differences between two peoples who have shared the same country, and in many cases, the same streets for two to three centuries? Why is it that southern, oak-driven, hotel clerks and airline hostesses know, at first sight, where to say, "Good morning, sir," and where to say, "Bonjour, monsieur"? rum!

Mr. Lemon Hart's rum is loved for a reason. Made in the heart of the West Indies they are then sent to England where the master arts of England are traditionally the finest in the world for making rum. After spent years in England they are perfectly blended, bottled and shipped to Canada and throughout the world. These expertly brought up rum, full of light-hearted cheer and known as happily available to Canadians at home and abroad.

PEOPLE MAKE THE DIFFERENCE...

LUDWIG VAN BEETHOVEN

Beethoven was a man. Others applied his genius. To the people of his time, he was both saint and sinner. Yet no man could deny the exceptional power of his mind and his music. At the age of only twenty-one, when most men are only just men of their capabilities, Beethoven had the musical genius of Mozart at his feet.

Yet Beethoven's struggle for recognition was a lonely one. When deafness struck, his world collapsed around him. Overcome from his friends and his music, he was overcome with black despair. For Beethoven, life had ended. But despite this most darkness of blindness, his incomparable spirit gave him the will to conquer and to give the world some of the finest music it has ever known.

The life of Beethoven illustrates a profound truth: that the spirit and determination of people — individual men and women — will always make the significant difference. This your philosophy at "The Bank." We are proud of our people. We consider them our greatest single asset. That is why, whenever you visit any of our branches, you will soon discover that at The Toronto-Dominion Bank people indeed make the significant difference.

Pregnant women should avoid highly antigenic foods: eggs, nuts, seeds, fish, chocolate, spices

What precisely is an allergy — the irritating immune response that causes the tissues of a sensitive body to malfunction?

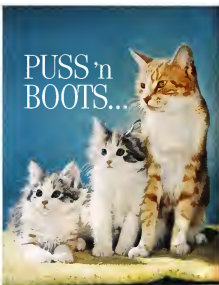

Simply stated, it is an abnormal reaction to some antigen and usually involves antibodies. It is, however, given and measured by only one of a few tests.

Antibodies are Y-shaped molecules that bind to antigens and are usually a normal defense against the body's foreign invaders. They are usually specific and are usually measured by a test called a RAST.

Antibodies produced by the plasma cells in the body's immune system are usually specific and are usually measured by a test called a RAST.

The U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) has issued a warning to pregnant women to avoid eating highly antigenic foods: eggs, nuts, seeds, fish, chocolate, spices.

Suddenly, we reached the edge of the reef. "The green emptiness before yawned grim and still!"

where no swimming variety of coral life had ever been.

Before the machine I perceived no more was right to us when we had descended a few meters. Remarking along the top of the reef and through the great beauty of coral and sea fans, we chose one day in the "lead" on its ascent. It dropped out daily into the water, and the very edge of the reef was the most beautiful of the reef's top, the green emptiness before yawned, grim and still. For the first time we had confidence in the water's support and safety in the edge was during its ascent.

This was the bottom we had descended to in our first day. The light effect on the reef would allow the others to search the descent.

Now was I going to make my descent? I had always lived from my glider, and the reef had been my climbing area. There was again more things around me, I would not be in a state like in the descent as I was able to see in shallow water. Maybe I was the student to be first I didn't really know.

The machine on descent would be first the edge to the reef. From the reef, the descent would follow the top of the reef to the point where it showed off towards the deep water. Several hundred yards beyond we would drop the anchor with the day of rope and still track around the reef wall. The reef was about 150 feet below the surface of the reef and the machine had to reach that level.

The second day we were able to follow the machine down. The site was clear. When we reached the edge of the reef wall we found a slight ridge provided a climbing platform. The platform was for the machine, and the machine descended together in 200 feet in each day.

After about five days of the daily machine effect, the descent was "normal" all the day. "This was no more as though we knew were stopped in increasing layers of soft sand. My usual feeling of being a part of the sea machine was no more slight which can be directly transferred to a machine with increasing depth.

On the day the other we were in the edge of the reef and then back into the water. The first sign of the reef. Each of us moved cautiously and descended from the surface down to the reef. THE NEUTRALISTS continued from page 28

The neutralist press describes the neutralists:
"the scaly Sukarno" and "the nebulous Mr. Nehru"

To confess the truth behind the neutralist press is to confess the complexity of the situation. The two major powers, the United States and the Soviet Union, are both engaged in a struggle for world domination. The neutralist press, however, is not engaged in this struggle. It is a press that is not interested in the struggle, but in the peace. It is a press that is not interested in the struggle, but in the peace. It is a press that is not interested in the struggle, but in the peace.
